Prism glass is a transparent and translucent architectural glass used to re-direct light through refraction. All of the types of glass we create and manufacture are unique. Our goal is to also make our glass stand-out in their environments and enhance the space it inhabits; allowing for multiple hybrid options. The patterns and styles harmonize with any design preference through traditional, historic, and contemporary architecture. Our glass products are made for custom size glass panes and generally 3mm, 6mm, and 9mm thickness.

When the light passes through the patterned glass, a diffusion phenomenon will occur which will deform the image of the object inside. People stand at different distances from the glass to observe the room, and the images of the objects they can see appear different. As the distance from the patterned glass increases the image of the object seen becomes more and more blurred. Due to the different patterns of the patterned glass the image of the objects passing through will also be different. Because glass has this characteristic using it as window glass will not affect the indoor lighting effect. It simply refracts the light in different directions to obscure the vision thru the glass.

VINTAGE. HISTORIC. RESTORATION

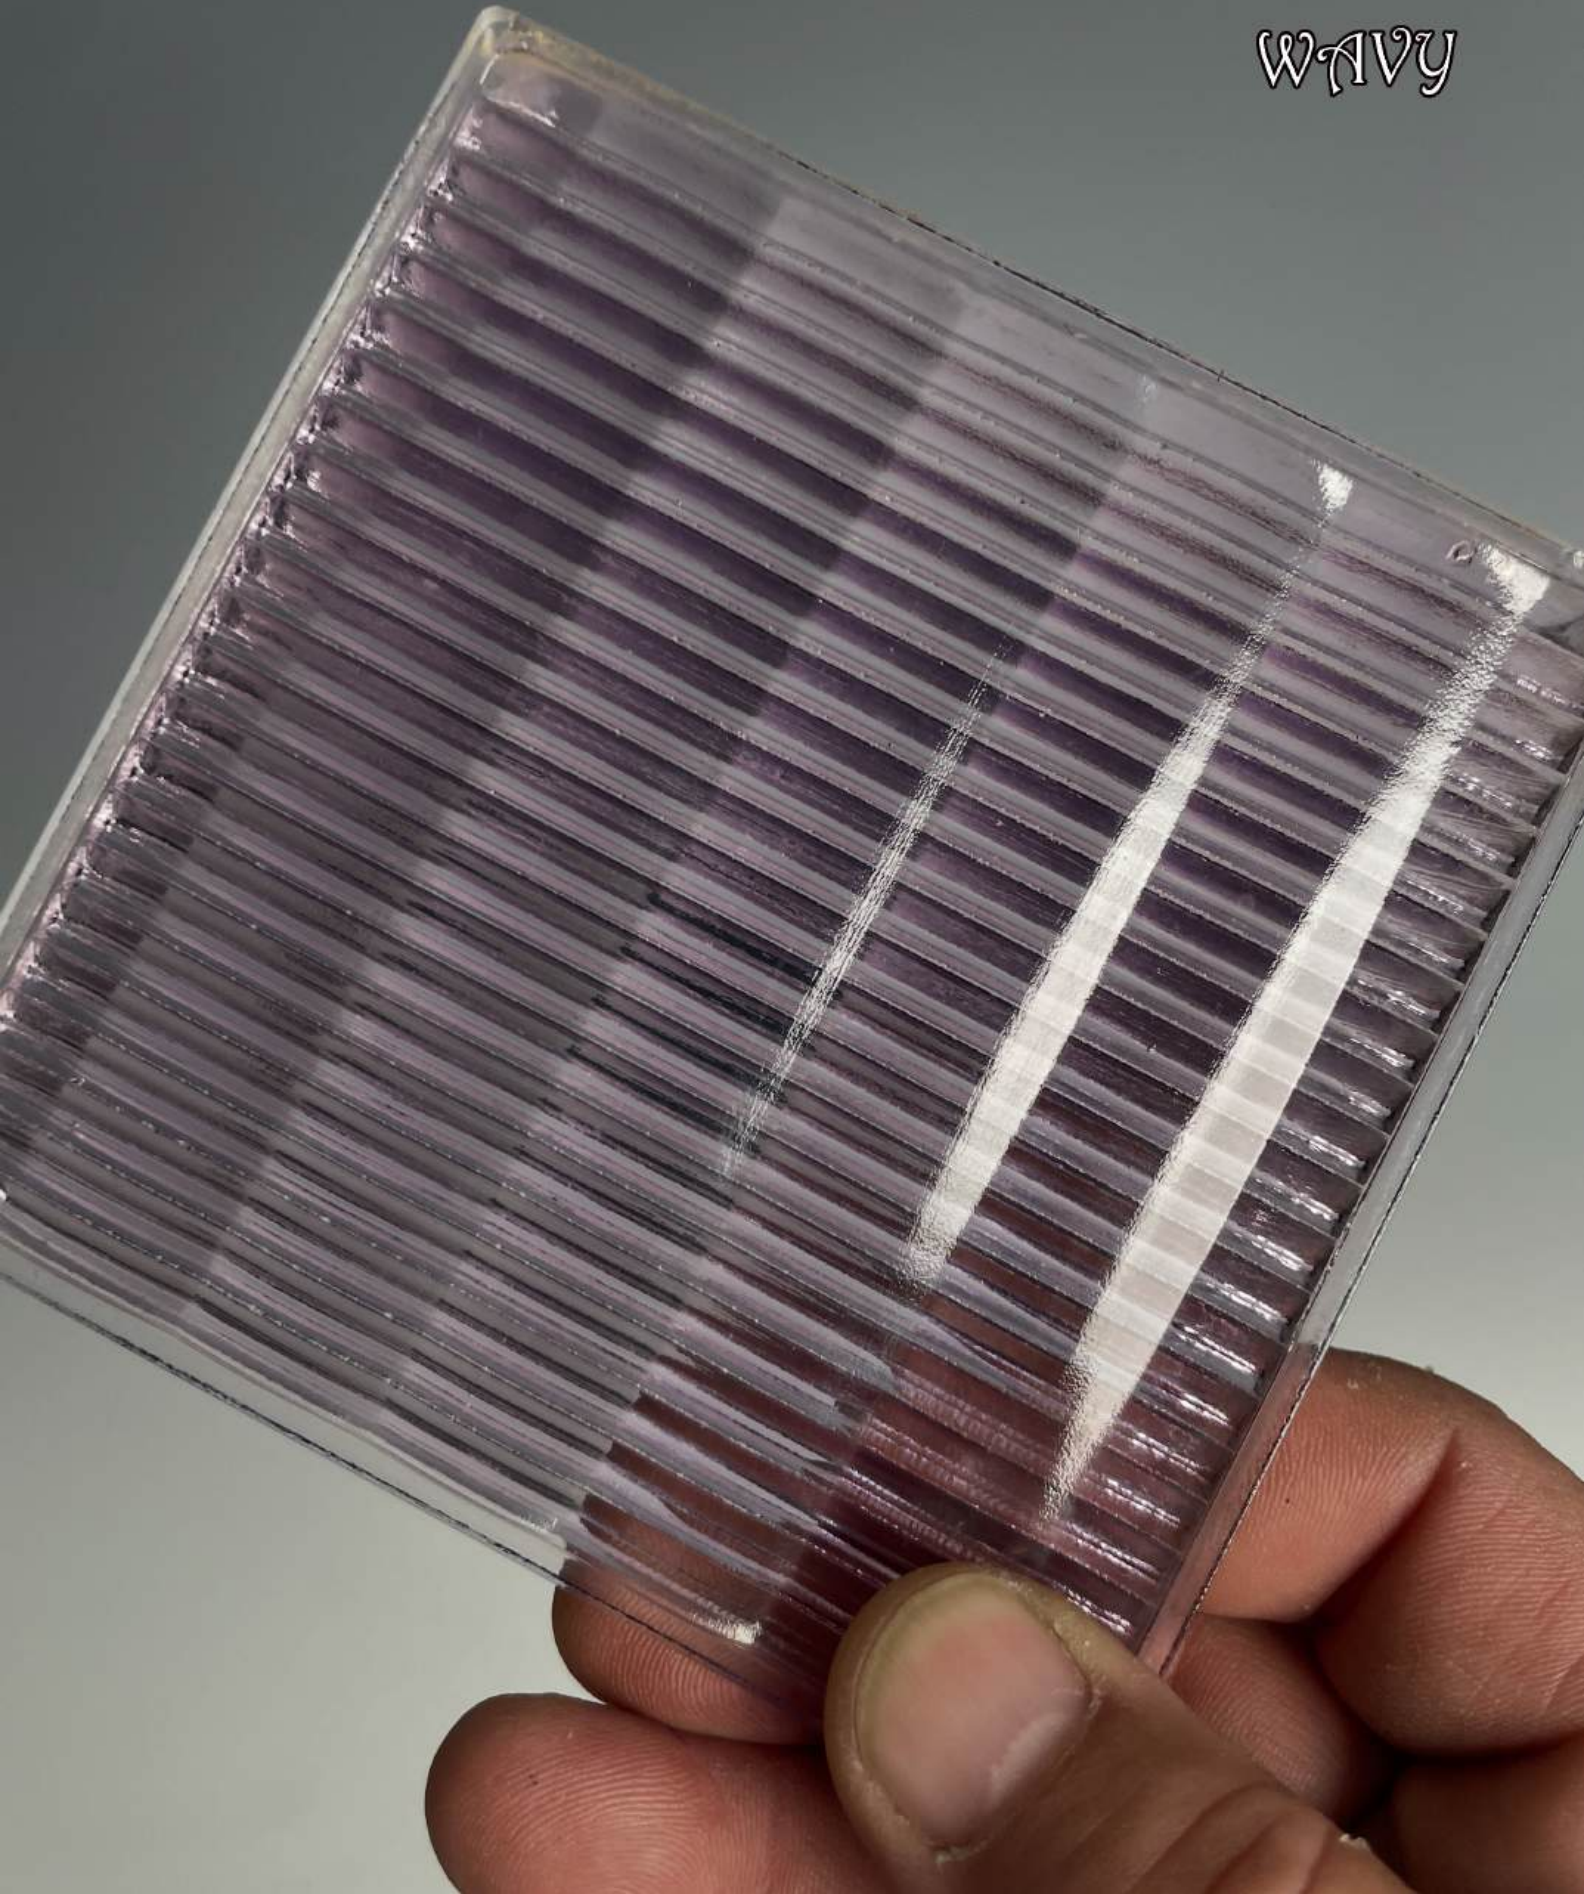

Our pressed tiles are created using a restored original press from the 1800's. The process involves gathering the glass, lowering it into the mold, and pressing it to the desired form and shape. Many of our molds are original transom window and sidewalk tiles from the 1800's. We also have the ability to produce custom fabricated molds.
