Rees Bowen Studios Hosts Prism Glass Company and Spiralglass in Presenting “Solarities” — A Bold Exploration of Color, Light, and Emotion in Glass

DALLAS, Texas — November 14, 2026 — Prism Glass Company and Spiralglass, led by renowned glass artist Rees Bowen, will unveil their latest collection of contemporary glass artistry, “Solarities,” on November 14, 2026, at Rees Bowen Studios in Dallas.

This striking new collection explores the relationship between glass, light, color, and emotion. Each piece is designed to transform as viewers move around it, shifting in tone, intensity, and perspective as light interacts with the glass from different angles.

Founded by Rees Bowen, Prism Glass Company and Spiralglass are recognized for their innovative approach to glass artistry, including the use of layered pigments, distinctive textures, and unconventional shaping techniques. “Solarities” is a fire inspired glass exhibition and open studio with live demonstrations. This exhibition will showcase new works in blown, fused, and pressed glass by Bowen, along with works by in-house artists Harrison DeMoss and Emma Valenzuela.

“Light is ever dynamic — it bends, scatters, and changes within each environment it inhabits,” says Bowen. “My work intertwines my thoughts with the ever-evolving world of glass art, capturing a distinct moment in time through permanent form.”

Guests attending the open studio will experience live glassblowing demonstrations by Bowen, DeMoss, and Valenzuela, along with custom installations combining ambient light and synchronized music to create an immersive environment centered around the interaction of glass and light.

Throughout the event, guests will have the opportunity to meet the artists, learn more about the creative processes behind the featured works, and hear about recent installations and projects. A selection of limited-edition glass pieces will also be available for purchase.
